

Carpe diem! Book now, and stay longer

Validity applies to all reservations travelling within 60 days of booking request

One thing that the pandemic has taught us is that life is precious, and that we need to 'seize the day'. Our yearning to travel is stronger than ever, whether to make up for lost time, celebrate a milestone birthday (albeit, retrospectively) or reunite with family. But the rules have changed. Increasingly, we're fielding last-minute requests and seeing a shift to spontaneous travel.

Call it 'stealing time' or prioritising what matters, travelling within days or weeks of making a booking has become the new normal in 2021. Tswalu now has some incredible offers for guests wanting to travel within 60 days of securing a booking, whether you choose to stay for 3, 4, 5 or 7 nights.

Your adventure begins in one of Tswalu's two sustainably designed camps, the Motse, with nine contemporary legae (Tswana for 'home'), or Tarkuni, an exclusive-use homestead for 10, reopened this year after a thoughtful renovation in tune with nature and the evolution of travellers' needs.

Tswalu's guarantee of a private vehicle, guide and tracker provides complete freedom to explore South Africa's biggest privately owned reserve. The wide, open spaces, so typical of the southern Kalahari's dramatic beauty, await exploration both on and off the vehicle. Actively tracking iconic Kalahari species, like a pride of black-maned lions or a brown hyena, adds to the interactive thrill of game viewing, as do sightings of elusive creatures, like pangolin and armadillo. With the opening of Restaurant Klein JAN, in collaboration with Michelin-starred chef Jan Hendrik van der Westhuizen, the culinary traditions and ingredients of the Northern Cape have become the unexpected heroes of an imaginative menu deeply rooted in this under-explored region. By choosing Tswalu, our guests not only become part of a bigger sustainability story but contribute towards the conservation of the southern Kalahari's biodiversity.
